These barges will be 150 feet by twenty-four beam, and will each carry five four beam, and will each earry five freight cars. Besides these, two barges have been purchased at Mound City for the same purpose. The Jo. Gales has been hauled off, and trucks are to be laid through her center for freight cars, and she will be used for towing freight car boats exclusively, while the Gregorie will do the ordinary ferrying. The company intended to have facilities for the transferring, both ways, of two hundred and twenty freight cars per day, if necessary, and thus, during the season of navloading at Dünleith. We learn that the Central have ordered the building of a new ferry steamer at Pittsburg, the same to be delivered at the opening of navigation next spring.

From the St. Joseph Union we take the following interesting account of the operations of the wrecking and snag boat Underwriter No. 1, commanded by Capt. Recse Dugan : The boat commenced operations, after out into sections, trimmed of their roots and set affeat upon the turbid current The next four days, up to September 25th, were occupied in cleaning out the left hand bed above Nebraska City. No s than thirty dangerous snags were sed, out to pieces and sent adrift in randed trees was an immense sycs nore, so large that four men could stand breast on its base and out off the wide this vicinity. Several large drift piles were also broken up here. One of the oranching roots. In Wyoming bend wenty-four snags were jerked out.

Thence the Underwriter steamed down to Kansas bend, one of the worst piaces in the entire river, where twenty wicked anags were jerked out of position and started toward the Gulf. Three immense drift piles were also broken up here. The next scene of operations was at Brownsville, where quite a number of shags and trees, lying opposite the city, all way landings: Steamers will all way landings: Steamers will be well as the city. snags and trees, lying opposite the city, were removed. At Nemsha, where the bank is fast eaving in, and again at St. Stephens, many obstructions were re-moved. At Rulo Landing, four regular old settlers were torn out, and shared the same fate as those above. In the vicinity of White Cloud, several days were put in to good advantage, and in the bend, four miles below, twenty were anatched bald headed. At Iowa Point damages, the Underwriter steamed to the wreck of the Lucey, took on board her machinery, caoin furniture, etc. and speut two days destroying her wheel, which protruded into the channel so much as to obstruct navigation. This task accomplished, she started down

A boat is now building in Cincinnati, larger and stronger than the Underwriter, expressly for this river. She will be entirely under the control of the government, and will work for one or two seasons ridding the channel of dangerous enage which threaten destruction to boats navigating this river. Capt. Richardson is of the cointon that two years anagging will pinion that two years' snagging will lear out the channel so that the ab-chee of snags will be noticeable by old
